Alain Magallon

Magallon has a highly varied aesthetic taste, experimenting with his images in subject matter and technique. His practice is heavily influenced by both Pop Art and religious imagery, which ranges from the 17th Century to the present day. Threads of Baroque, the Pre-Raphaelite's and the Surreal are also apparent in his highly finished mysterious acrylic and oil paintings. His narrative imagery aims to produce a duality or imbalance between the neoclassical frozen or theatrical pose of the models and the association of the matter and the colours.

The graphic acrylic backgrounds of the paintings contrast with the oil based figures. This furthers the imbalance that Magallon is creating within the subject matter whilst also adding aesthetic depth. Religious symbolism and dramatic metaphorical analogies are often used to question faith and belief while the self-absorption of modern day is depicted through the subject's representation.

As an artist he experiments with different techniques and styles from abstract to figurative. His paintings are a colourful narrative, emotional, fun, dramatic, curious and decorative.

His intention is to manipulate images from different periods and techniques and then to marry them together giving them new reason to be within the image. He recycles images to show the subjectivity of what we see and to change images from their context without diminishing their strength or emotional power.
